Dear Aaron,

The proposal to install a new Capital Bike Share station in front of 2424 18th Street, NW poses several concerns.

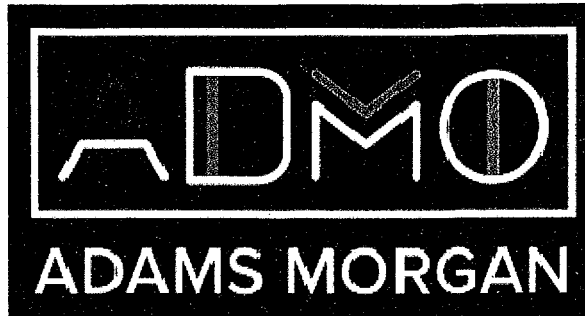

When the new Wawa store opens this Fall at 2424 18th Street, NW, there will be a lot of pedestrian traffic and commercial unloading which will be in direct conflict with the bikeshare users. Because this sidewalk is narrower than most, the opportunities for conflict with the variety of users is high. We are also concerned with conflicts with cars as users pull bikes in and out of the station.

There are already three Capital Bikeshare stations within a block of each other at Columbia Road and Belmont Street, NW, Adams Mill & Columbia Roads, NW, and 18th & Wyoming in front of Marie Reed School and Recreation. Why can't DDOT expand those locations?

These points are in addition to the issue of three fewer metered parking spaces in the heart of Adams Morgan. We would like to begin to explore with DDOT adding a couple of Pick Up/Drop off Zones in Adams Morgan along 18th Street.

We the undersigned think that PUDO zones are a better use of curbside space than a new location for a Capital Bikeshare station when existing bikeshare locations can be expanded.

Dear Aaron,

The proposal to install a new Capital Bike Share station in front of 2424 18th Street, NW poses several concerns to me as a business and property owner.

When the new Wawa store opens below my office this Fall, there will be a lot of pedestrian traffic and commercial unloading which will be in direct conflict with the bikeshare users. Because this sidewalk is a narrower than most, the opportunities for conflict with the variety of users is high.

There are already three Capital Bikeshare stations within a block of each other at Columbia Road and Belmont Street, NW, Adams Mill & Columbia Roads, NW, and 18th & Wyoming in front of Marie Reed School and Recreation. Why can't DDOT expand those locations?

Representing my business, Linda Roth Associates, Inc., in the commercial/residential condominium that I own at 2424 18th Street, NW, as well as the other condo owners of 2424 18th Street, NW, we ask that you reconsider 2424 18th Street, NW as a new location for a Capital Bikeshare station.

Respectfully,
